

THE STRANGE AUTUMN DAY

Once upon a time on an autumn day in a little town called Strangeville, there lived six people. They were the three little pigs, Red Riding Hood, Wolfie and Mr Bigglesworth the cruellest toughest biggest guinea pig in the world!

Someone was blowing down the pigs' houses which are made of bathroom tiles, leaves & mud. This was a mystery to the pigs and they didn't know who was doing it. They suspected Mr Bigglesworth because he used his leaf blower every day around his house to clean the leaves and pile them up into a heap because he loved jumping into the leaves.

So the pigs went to his house to investigate his pile of leaves in his garden.

They had to go through his house to get to the garden. Whilst they were in the house they saw that he was having his bathroom done. Whilst the pigs were investigating his heap Mr Bigglesworth came charging out of his house into the garden. The pigs jumped into the leaves and hid in the enormous pile. Mr Bigglesworth got out his plastic sheet and started to put some of the leaves from the pile onto it using his big grabber's. The pigs were petrified.

"I've got you, you little pests", Mr Bigglesworth said when he found them. He jumped on them and grabbed them by their ears and he took them to Little Red Riding Hood's house. She was the local Police lady; Mr Bigglesworth told her that they were trespassing in his house. When they walked through the door Little Red Riding Hood was busy looking in her art cupboard, she was cross because they had interrupted her from painting. The pigs told her what was happening to their houses and that they think its Mr Bigglesworth because he is having his bathroom done and he loves piles of leaves. Mr Bigglesworth said, "it's not me." Miss Red Riding Hood told the pigs that it was probably Wolfie up to his usual tricks again.

They all went together to Wolfie's house to investigate & arrest him. They crept up to the house and looking through the window they saw Wolfie making a collage of mud and leaves. Mr Bigglesworth smashed down the door with his gigantic foot and he jumped and sat on Wolfie's head. Little Red reached for her hand cuffs and realised that she'd left the handcuffs at home. Mr Bigglesworth sat on Wolfie whilst the pigs ran back to get the cuffs.

The pigs opened the door to Miss Red's house and found the cuffs in the lounge, and just hanging there on the wall was a mosaic made from the exact same tiles as the pig's houses. They were surprised and astonished. They hurried back to Wolfie's house. Instead of handcuffing Wolfie they put them on Little Red Riding Hood. Mr Bigglesworth said sorry to Wolfie for sitting on his head and Little Red went to jail for vandalising the pigs houses. The pigs and Wolfie all went back to Mr Bigglesworth's house to help to finish his new bathroom and jump in the enormous leaves.

Louis Fisher

