Relationships and Sex Education (RSE) Policy

This Policy applies to the whole school, including the EYFS.

Rationale

Effective sex and relationship education is essential if young people are to make responsible, informed and healthy decisions about their lives, both now and in the future.

From September 2020 the school adheres to the requirements of the Relationships Education, Relationships and Sex Education and Health Education (England) Regulations 2019 made under sections 34 and 35 of the Children and Social Work Act 2017, and will follow the statutory guidance as provided by the DfE. These regulations require:

- All primary schools in England to teach age-appropriate 'relationships education'; and
- All secondary schools in England to teach age-appropriate 'relationships and sex education'

Sex and Relationships Education is an important part of the PSHE curriculum at Davenies, where it is recognised as the right of all pupils to have access to sex education. The school has a duty to respect the different starting points of all its pupils however, and the importance of sensitivity in this matter is seen as being very considerable.

Changing values in society have provided a big impetus for change. The pressures children are under from film, television and the press are constant. The need for a clear understanding of, literally, the facts of life is therefore important, and guidance in such matters even more so. Davenies needs to respond to that pressure, whilst highlighting to pupils the usefulness of traditional Christian values in an ever-changing modern world.

Pupils need to know how the human body works, and with it must come an appreciation of the emotional framework of relationships. Pupils need to learn respect for themselves, for others, and for their sexuality. Pupils need to appreciate that a worthwhile sexual relationship can only exist as part of a wider, more permanent relationship.

The Role of the School

When addressing aspects of sex education and personal relationships, the school must remember that it is moving into a field of human relationships where the personal experiences of the child, the circumstances of the family, examples set by public figures and the influence of the media may all be at odds with what seems to be the 'appropriate' message. Approaches to sex education that work best:

- When they are part of an integrated approach to personal, social and moral education which conveys knowledge and develops skills
- When they help pupils to acquire the knowledge and skills necessary to resist peer group pressure and to make informed choices
- When the teacher plans and delivers lessons of good quality using well-chosen material to guide discussion
- When instruction begins at an early age and develops using methods and material which match the age and ability of the child
- When the approaches used indicate that there is seldom a single right answer but always a relevant and applicable skill

The school takes into account the religious background of all pupils when planning teaching of this subject and ensures compliance with the provision of the Equality Act 2010 (see the school's Equality Policy for further information). Likewise, the school ensures that the subject is accessible to all pupils in line with the SEN and Learning Difficulties Policy.

Aims

The school's approach to sex and relationship education should aim to:

- Make pupils aware of their bodies
- Enable them to understand and care for them
- Place human relationships in meaningful contexts
- Develop an emotional dimension to sexuality
- Promote healthy lifestyles and worthwhile relationships
- Emphasise Christian values within the context of relationships

Objectives

The whole ethos of the school, the content of the curriculum, the environment for learning and the examples set by the staff should enable pupils:

- To see adult relationships at their best
- To become aware of the differences between gender and sex
- To raise their levels of self esteem
- To make wise choices and informed decisions
- To develop a sense of personal initiative especially in relationships
- To accept responsibility in relationships
- To know and value their own personal qualities and skills and to recognize and value those of others
- To become self-confident
- To enter into, develop and maintain a range of relationships
- To develop a will to succeed as a valued member of a variety of relationships

The Curriculum

The curriculum for sex education is likely to draw its factual content from those parts of the Science curriculum which deals with the human body as a living organism.

The nature of human relationships will be addressed through the PSHE programme, and also RS (or TPR). The methods employed will be largely if not wholly based on the skilled use of role play discussion and simulation. Much valuable material can be extracted from literature and poetry.

The School will aim to balance the physical and emotional inputs.

Provision

Relationship Education (PSHE) is provided from Reception upwards, throughout the school, under the overall responsibility of the Head of PSHE (see PSHE Policy for teaching allocation of PSHE across all year groups). Relationships and Sex Education (RSE) will begin in the Pre-Prep under the guidance of the Head of Pre-Prep, linking in with growth and will be covered in the Summer Term's Science programme. It will be continued right through into Year 8, where it will, again, link with the Science programme under the Head of Science. In Year 8, it is taught by an external organisation, Brook, as part of the Leavers' Programme and over a full morning. The topics that are included in these sessions are decided by the Head of PSHE with the Head of Senior School (Years 7 & 8) and can be changed each year depending on what is deemed necessary for that particular year group.

Please see PSHE Policy for details of how this subject is monitored and evaluated.

The School Nurse will support the teaching of this subject.

Parental Engagement

In order to work in partnership with parents and carers, they are invited into school from time-to-time to attend introduction talks or drop-in sessions about how the school teaches Relationships Education, Relationships and Sex Education and Health Education, to pupils of different ages, and the development of the subject, with opportunities for parents to engage in the subject, view resources, discuss topics or concerns and ask questions of the Head of PSHE, e.g. how you might approach these topics at home. Parents will also be regularly reminded of their rights to withdraw (see below).

There will also be a parent survey sent out each year asking for parental feedback and opinion on our scheme of work.

Right to Withdraw

Under current regulations there is no parental right to withdraw pupils from Relationships Education.

The tables at Appendix A highlight the RSE topics that will be covered by different year groups within the 1Decision PSHE programme that the School follows. More detailed information of how these topics fit into our wider PSHE curriculum can be accessed on the parent/carer zone of the 1Decision website or via the PSHE parent organisers on MySchoolPortal (MSP). Information about puberty lessons has also been added within this table as this is considered part of Health Education which is another statutory part of the PSHE curriculum as identified in the September 2020 legislation from the DfE.

Under current regulations there is no parental right to withdraw pupils from Relationships Education. All pupils have access to Relationship and Sex Education (RSE) as part of the school timetable, however some parents/carers with child(ren) within Years R-6 may wish to withdraw their child(ren) from Sex Education lessons, for which they have limited parental rights. Please note that the Sex Education areas of the Science curriculum are still statutory. Any parent/carer who has asked for their child(ren) to be removed from SE lessons needs to have authorisation from the Headmaster.

Please note that the School is required to document and keep a record of this process. Any pupil who is withdrawn will receive a purposeful education during the period of withdrawal.

Other Policies and Review

This Policy should be read in conjunction with the following school policies:-

- Child Protection Policy
- Curriculum Policy
- Equality Policy
- Pastoral Care Policy
- PSHE Policy
- SEN and Learning Difficulties Policy

This Policy is reviewed annually, and is published on the School's website in line with regulations, or is available on request from the School Office.

Updated: September 2023, Head of PSHE

Review: September 2024, Head of PSHE
